AMERICA VS. EUROPE—SEE AMERICA FIRST.

During this period when Europe is being devastated by grim war, and the globe trotters of this country can no longer seek amusement and romance in the Old World, it is but natural to turn to our own country and learn something of what it may offer to offset the supposed privation because of inability to reach and enjoy Europe. Historically, Europe goes much deeper into the past than America, but nevertheless this country has its history and its associations really of inestimable more value and interest to the American, and with which every patriotic citizen should take an especial pride in familiarizing himself.

Take the region through Virginia, for instance. In what section can one find historic associations and interests so thrilling to a lover of his country? Its mountains are filled with hospitable resorts which boast a romance, both sentimental and political, which, while not so old, are certainly more beautiful, and intimately more appealing to Americans than can be found abroad. For example, let us take White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Probably nowhere else in the world is the evolution of resorts so vividly portrayed. Now stands there a modern structure defining the world in elegance, comfort, health and amusement. Once the Indians pitched their wigwags on the same site, and under direction of their Medicine Man availed themselves of the curative properties of the waters, just as civilized man does today under the resident physician. When the early settlers crowded back the Red Man, he sought refuge in Virginia's sheltering and inviting mountains, and when he sallied forth, east or west, to war on the whites or other tribes, it was at White Sulphur that the squaws, papooses and old men were left. They left legends and stories in abundance. About the Springs still hangs the legend of the Indian maiden whose spirit nightly, at the witching hour, haunts the spring that the draining of the last drop may be witnessed, and thus the signal for the restoration of her lover be realized.

Thus was White Sulphur known to the Indians. Then, about the time of the drafting of that momentous document, the Constitution, we find the white pioneers occupying the ground in shacks and tents that their afflicted ones might benefit from the curative waters. Before Saratoga or Newport were thought of, White Sulphur's prestige was almost world-wide. It was here our country's history was made; for here met the great men and mapped out campaigns and decided momentous policies. Here the proud, cultured and aristocratic elements of all sections met, even as they meet today. There can now be seen at White Sulphur the old lodgers bearing the names and accounts of Millard Filmore, Rufus Choate, Henry Clay, Franklin Pierce, Edward Prince of Wales, and many more makers of history. Attractions could be cited for other resorts too, but why go on?

Then why should Americans lament inability to get out of their country?

INQUIRY FOR KENTUCKY TOBACCO.

C., relative to a market for Kentucky tobacco and chemicals. A copy of the complete report may be had on application to the Bureau and its branch offices, by giving file No. 16,149.

250,000 ARTIFICIAL LEGS ORDERED BY EUROPE.

London.—Already 250,000 artificial legs are needed for men crippled in the war and before the fighting is finished, double or triple that number may be necessary.

Huge orders are being given for artificial arms, and many American firms are sending representatives abroad to get orders.

TO OBSERVE APPOMATTOX CENTENNIAL.

Washington, April 7.—Patriotic and historical societies, together with surviving veterans of both the north and the south, are preparing for an appropriate observance at the end of this week of the semi-centennial of the surrender at Appomattox and the virtual close of the war between the states.

Anniversary meetings are being arranged for this city and it is also proposed to hold appropriate exercises at the scene of the surrender of General Lee. It was fifty years ago today that the end of the long struggle became apparent to all observers, though the actual surrender of General Lee's army did not take place until two days later. It was on this date, April 7, 1865, that General Grant sent his first note to General Lee, calling attention to the hopelessness of further resistance and asking for the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia in order to prevent the further effusion of blood.

The surrender at Appomattox was regarded by the country as an actual end of the war. The official statement of the number of men surrendered as belonging to the Army of Northern Virginia was 27,805. It was estimated that the force of General Lee, on the evacuation of Richmond, consisted of not far from 50,000 men. Many had fallen or been taken prisoners during the retreat and many others, anticipating the course of events, had left the army and returned home.

On the day after his surrender General Lee issued the following farewell address to his army:

"After four years of arduous service, marked by unsurpassed courage and fortitude, the Army of Northern Virginia has been compelled to yield to overwhelming numbers and resources. I need not tell the survivors of so many hard-fought battles, who have remained steadfast to the last, that I have consented to this result from no distrust of them, but holding that valor and devotion could accomplish nothing that could compensate for the loss that would attend the continuation of the contest, I have determined to avoid the useless sacrifice of those whose past valor has endeared them to their countrymen.

"By the terms of agreement officers and men can return to their homes and remain there until exchanged. You will take with you the satisfaction that proceeds from the consciousness of duty faithfully performed, and I earnestly pray that a merciful God will extend you His blessing and protection. With an increasing admiration of your constancy and devotion to your country, and a grateful remembrance of your kind and generous consideration of myself, I bid you an affectionate farewell.

R. E. LEE, General.

The surrender of General Lee's army was followed almost immediately by the voluntary surrender of all the troops in northeastern Virginia, including those in the Shenandoah valley.

NEWS ABOUT CHICKENS.

A number of poultry shows have had to be called off because of the epidemic of the foot and mouth disease among the cattle and hog herds of the country.

At the exhibitions of the Genesee Valley Poultry and Pigeon Association, held in Rochester, N. Y., the Glenwood Poultry Farm, of Syracuse, sold a White Orpington cock to F. S. Ellwanger for $800.

Something of a novelty was introduced at the Elgin, Ill., poultry show. It was a crowing contest, prizes being awarded to the birds crowing the most times within a given time in the evening. A White Leghorn cock won first prize, crowing thirty-eight times.

The turkey crop of Collin county, Texas, for 1914, is estimated at $100,000.

Poultrymen of the state of Washington are determined to have protection against the importation of foreign eggs, and with this end in view they are going to ask the state Legislature to pass a bill requiring that all imported eggs be branded with the name of the country from which they were imported.

Shipsloads of Chinese eggs have been brought into Pacific coast ports and later sold as American eggs, to the loss of the home producers.

The Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington held that the rating of the poultry in earloads by western railroads as third instead of fourth-class freight, thus increasing the charges, is justified.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR AT GALVESTON.

Galveston, Texas, April 7.—The Knights Templar of Texas met in this city today for the sixty-second convocation of the grand commandery. In their honor the business district was elaborately decorated with the emblems of Masonry. Prior to beginning their business sessions this morning, the visiting Knights paraded to the First Presbyterian church, where special services were held. The business of the convocation will be concluded tomorrow.

And Not Force of Law Is Only Means of Making People Moral, Says Rabbi.

"It is curious how certain benevolent people are trying to make men (and in default of men, children,) law-abiding, moral, religious, by the force of law and laws," said Rabbi Louis Grossman in his sermon at the Plum Street Temple, Cincinnati. "They snatch the bottle from men's lips, by way of statute, or ice from their kitchen, or the razor from their faces, and they think they are achieving big results," he continued.

"They do not know that there is only one fact in morals, in religion, and in character, and that is will; that men are not decent, law-abiding, just and respectful because they are forced to be, but because they want to be; and that genuine reformation does not come through the police, but by one's own determination.

"There was a time when we believed that we can give morality, or religion, by reading (or delivering) sermons, or scriptural selections (which is simply somebody else's sermons). This infernal method goes along with superficial religion, as it evidences also poor and naive pedagogy. Nobody gets anything by the infernal method except infection. And even in disease, every thing depends on personal reaction. No body has religion or character, or real human life, unless he stands up by himself. A man is a man by the assertion of his own sovereign self. It is this self which declares its freedom, and no body can do it for him.

"Character is not acquired in mystic ways. It is acquired in the open, or not at all. And it is not given to us by others, but it is made by ourselves. An education that wants to give character from the outside has a poor notion of character. Character can not be gotten, can not be a gift, can not be bestowed. It must be created by the person himself. The man must decide upon it himself. He must will to make it, he himself. There is no other to manhood except the road he lays out for himself. A man has character, religion, morality, not because it is preached, talked, read into him, but because he wills to have and live it."

AN EASY PROBLEM.

Here's a light and airy problem for the boys and girls who have a fondness for puzzles:

"Suppose a train is a mile long and there are two stations which are five miles apart. The engine is a mile out of town and the caboose at the one depot. A man gets on at the caboose as soon as the train moves and walks the length of the train while in motion, and when the engine stops at the other depot he gets off.

"The question is, how far did he ride or walk?"

ASA SAYS TWO MORE SNOWS.

(Lexington Leader.)

Colonel Asa Martin, the well known local weather prognosticator, announced that although Easter came early this year, which is generally regarded as a harbinger of early spring, winter would not be over until the two snows he has promised fall. Col. Martin says that he has two more snows on the way and that they may be expected before the middle of April.

REUNION OF G. O. P. LAWMAKERS.

Lansing, Mich., April 7.—The "William Alden Smith for President" boom was favorably discussed here today by the many Republican leaders of Michigan gathered here to attend a reunion of members of the 1905 state Legislature. The 1905 Legislature was the only one in the history of Michigan that was solidly Republican and the reunion was held to mark the tenth anniversary of its session.

The Berea Citizen offers this wholesome advice to mothers: "For six years every mother has her child in her own arms and care. By the end of that time she can have him trained to tell the truth, to desire to help, to control his temper, and to really pray. Those four things that are in every mother's power will carry the coming man farther toward all that is good on earth and in heaven than talent or riches or education even—it is the highest education."

Tentative plans have been made by the management of the Ben Ali Theater, Lexington, for the installation of a large orchestral instrument to take the place of the regular band of musicians, and to put on a daily program of high-class motion pictures during the summer.

Be cautious with whom you associate, and never give your company or your confidence to those of whose good principles you are not sure.—Bishop Copleidge.
